

II Social Violence: Organizational and Psychological Perspectives –workshop

Friday parallel sessions I 10.45 – 12.00 (Nov. 6th 2009)

Description

The aim of this workshop is to join together scholars and practitioners interested in organizational and psychological perspectives in relation to the question of social violence in today's society. The papers discuss the psychological reception of violence in the media, the role of communication in constructing "healthy" identities, as well as strategies for preventing school violence, and practices of crisis management in communal contexts. The workshop group hopes to enrich and stimulate new forms of dialogue between the theoretical and the practical orientations around the issue of social violence.
