Interculturality as a transdisciplinary concept Approaches – Applications – Desiderata

Workshop within the framework of the FLSHASE key area
MIS – Multilingualism and Intercultural Studies

5 November 2014, 9:00 am-5:30 pm, Campus Walferdange, Room 1.09 (XII)

Ever since the 1990s, interculturality has been one of the guiding concepts in the debate regarding culture, language and diversity. We can discern various uses and specific appropriations of the concept which can be traced back to different disciplines, subject areas and knowledge interests. This variety forms the starting point for the workshop, in which the various approaches of interculturality will be discussed and their practical applications and theoretical potential investigated. This will lead on to the question of how to plan and make use of interculturality as a transdisciplinary concept for work in the FLSHASE key area 'Multilingualism and Intercultural Studies' (MIS).

Invitees include renowned scholars in the social and cultural sciences:
